

Open Banking switchers actesy new in the F10 Accelerator Programme

The F10 Fintech Incubator & Accelerator has nominated the St.Gallen start-up actesy for its new programme. In addition, fintech specialist Marc Lussy was elected to actesy's advisory board.

St.Gallen, 17 September 2021

actesy AG will receive future support from the fintech accelerator F10 in Zurich. The company from eastern Switzerland is one of 25 European, Asian and American FinTech and InsurTech start-ups selected for the new funding programme. actesy was chosen from a total of over 350 applicants. actesy CEO Andreas Imthurn is pleased to be included in the programme: «We expect visibility, new contacts and projects at banks and other companies from our inclusion in the F10 Accelerator Programme.»

The aim of the three-month programme, which runs from now on, is to accelerate start-ups. This year, the focus was on companies active in the field of sustainable finance and SME services. F10 corporate partners SIX, Julius Baer, Baloise and Generali/HITS were closely involved in the selection of the startups and will now also work closely with the 25 promising companies.

«actesy will be crucial for the innovation of the industry»

Deborah Schaefer, startup coach responsible for program management at F10, is excited about the collaboration with actesy: «The St.Gallen-based startup will use its unique technology to help established financial companies better integrate their diverse systems. This will be crucial for innovation in the industry.»

Marc Lussy new on the actesy Advisory Board

The startup from eastern Switzerland is now also being advised by FinTech aficionado Marc Lussy. Lussy, who was brought onto the advisory board by actesy's board of directors, will help the company gain a foothold in the banking sector more quickly. During his 20 years leading IT projects, Lussy heard time and again from software vendors that interfaces would not be a problem. But in fact, there were always many unpleasant surprises. «From what I've seen so far from actesy, this company now seems to have managed to really greatly simplify the interface issue», Lussy elaborates. Especially in the open banking context, this topic is more important than ever, he adds.

Marc Lussy is, among other things, Partner and Head of Business Development at the WealthTech startup IBO, Senior Advisor and Mentor at the Incubator F10 and has also twice accompanied the official FinTech promotion group of the Swiss government around Finance Minister Ueli Maurer. Lussy takes up his new role on actesy's Advisory Board with immediate effect. In the last almost six years in which he has worked with startups, the central element of success has always been the team, he says: «In the case of actesy, the founders are very experienced entrepreneurs who complement each other excellently.» Despite these qualities, he says the management of the young St.Gallen-based company is very open to advice and input. «I look forward to the future collaboration.»

Company actesy AG

actesy was founded in 2017 and today employs 15 people in St.Gallen and Berlin. The Swiss startup is a specialist in integrating various data sources and offers end-to-end digitization solutions for companies. «actesy simplifies complex data and is the only platform that is really easy and flexible to use», explains actesy CEO, Andreas Imthurn.
